The impetus carried it over the bridge, and past an embankment 40 feet high, when it was precipitateu down the descent about 20 feet, the rear end triking a large tree, crushing the end of the car, and arresting further motion. Had it gone to the bottom, the occupants must all have been crushed to death! The brakesman, named Traffin, was severely injured, and it is feared fatally. Mr. John Temple, of Middletown, had his head cut badly, but not dangerously; every occupant of the car was more or less injured. We could not learn all the particulars. The locomotive, baggage car, and first pas senger car, remained upon the track; the rear car was jerked from the rails, but did not sus tain any damage, and the occupants of the cars which remained on the road were not injured.
